A passenger in Parker's car was not injured in the accident. No information on the driver of the other car was available at press time.

Johnsonian Staff Writer

Approximately 500 high school and college students will participate in the 12th annual Winthrop College Model United Nations, April 6 through 9.

The Model U.N. at Winthrop was founded by Dr. Melford Wilson, professor of Political Science

Two charged with Winthrop larceny

By TIM O'BRIANT
Johnsonian Assistant City Editor

Public Safety officials are beginning extradition proceedings against two suspects who have been charged with stealing valuable computer equipment and textbooks from Winthrop College, Chief Ralph Harper said.

Howard Pratt, Jr., 41, was arrested in Kennesaw, Ga., after he refused to pay a $40 rental charge at a KOA campground lot.

PRATT

CROWLEY

When the arresting officer searched Pratt during booking procedures, he found more than 35 different false pieces of identification, and nearly $75,000 in cash.

This prompted Kennesaw City Police to search the suspect's motor home where they found his girlfriend, 24-year-old Barbara Diane Crowley, putting stolen license plates on the vehicle and arrested her.

Once inside the vehicle, investigators found a computer system made up of pieces stolen from different locations, including a laser printer from Thurmond Hall stolen in early February.

Along with the equipment, 40,000 blank keys that Pratt, a master locksmith, used to make his own key to each building he planned to burglarize, were found in the recreational vehicle.

Kinard rededicated

By VERONICA TRACY
Johnsonian Staff Writer

Winthrop College President Martha Piper referred to the 1986 Kinard fire as a "baptism" last Monday during the rededication ceremony for Kinard Hall.

Kinard was rededicated during an afternoon ceremony due to extensive renovations which resulted from the damage done by lightning in August, 1986.

"It was baptism by fire because it was the first big incident to happen to me as president," Piper said.

Before the fire, Kinard was the home of the school of business and the college of arts and sciences. The school of business has since been moved to Thurmond Hall.

Albert Lyles, dean of the college of arts and sciences, also spoke, focusing on the positive aspects of a good liberal arts education.

"A liberal education helps students pose questions to themselves: what is man? who am I? what do I know, and how do I know?" he said.

Lyles also said educators and advocates can strengthen freshmen skills through tests, writing skills, and through the visiting professors program which helps to influence high school students.

"Kinard Hall is more attractive and functional. It celebrates the liberal arts which have a focus at Winthrop, and the college is unusual in its

Finalists chosen for new school dean

By VERONICA TRACY
Johnsonian Staff Writer

Stephen Barnes, Michael Cerveris, and Bennet Lentzner are the three finalists vying for the position of dean for the newly-created school of visual and performing arts.

Barnes is currently the dean of the college of fine arts at Eastern New Mexico University. He has served as coordinator of undergraduate and graduate music education programs and as the supervisor of field experiences and the summer session at the Henry Kendall college of arts and sciences at the University of Tulsa from 1978-1981.

Barnes also has served as department chair and on the resource faculty of the Montgomery County Public Schools, in Rockville, Maryland from 1972-1978. He was a University Fellow at Ohio State University.

Cerveris, presently the director of the institute of the arts at Duke University, has served as the chairman of the division of fine arts at Alverno College in Wisconsin, executive director of the institute of the arts and assistant chairman of the department of music at Marshall University in West Virginia. He also was chair of the piano department at Marshall.

Lentzner is now the dean of the college of visual and performing arts at Radford University.

He has acted as dean of the college of fine arts, director of instrumental ensembles and chairman of the performing arts series at Radford. He has served as president of the council of arts administrators in Virginia Higher Education and was artistic director at Southwest Virginia Opera Society.

This new school, approved earlier this year by the board of trustees, combines music, art and design, dance and theater into one school.

The principle qualifications for dean include having broad experience in the arts and administration areas, and being able to work well with the community.

"The current candidates are well qualified and they also have good national reputations," said Mike Smith, vice president of academic affairs.

"This is a major step for Winthrop and is clearly a commitment to the arts. This school will foster cooperation among the different areas. It will also lead to increased exposure in the community, state and region," he said. More activities will involve the students majoring in any of the areas.

Smith said this is a similar step to the one made in 1970, when the school of business administration was formed.

"Ten years down the road, this will be seen as a major turning point," he said.

Trustee board approves liberal arts master's degree

By TINA EZELL
Johnsonian City Editor

The Winthrop College board of trustees last Saturday approved the addition of a master's of liberal arts degree to the Winthrop curriculum, the only degree of its kind in this area.

"There's no other program quite like it in South Carolina," said Mike Smith, vice president of academic affairs. "We're looking forward to working with more mature students."

Albert Lyles, dean of the college of arts and sciences, said the main admission requirement for this degree is a bachelor's degree in almost any field, but the liberal arts master's student would most likely be an arts and sciences major in undergraduate school.

"This program is designed primarily for enrichment," he said.

He said the master of liberal arts degree will be an individualized degree, designed to fit each student's needs according to the program the student chooses.

Lyles said one part of the program will focus on the four main requirements of the master's program. Part of the program will center around what is experienced through our senses, such as watching animals to determine their habits, part will center around reasoning and logic, part will be directed to the humanities, and the last part will help the student pull the first three together.

Lyles said he does not think Winthrop will offer a doctorate in this field because "Winthrop hasn't been and doesn't seek certification to offer doctorate degrees."

Terry Peterson, executive assistant to the president, said during the meeting that Winthrop has so far been approved for 93.2 percent of full formula funding.

"The budget and control board recommended 90.7 percent of formula funding," he said. He added that the senate finance committee will meet sometime in April to review the budget and make the final decision.

Also discussed during the meeting:

- The faculty will decide at the next faculty conference whether to change the bylaws concerning academic governance.

- Steve Vacendak, director of athletics, said recruitment for the 1988-89 basketball team is going "nicely."

- Winthrop president Martha Piper said Winthrop College tuition will not be increased next year.

Wellness coordinator says health fair successful

500 turn out to have their health tested

By TIM O'BRIANT
Johnsonian Assistant City Editor

Despite long lines and delays, the student health fair last week was called a phenomenal success by student Wellness Coordinator Vicky Baroody.

More than 500 students participated in the event which included medical screening of cholesterol level, body fat, blood sugar, lung capacity, hearing and nutrition.

Baroody said she was surprised to see students anxiously awaiting the event.

"At 10 a.m. we had a line of people around the corner waiting to register," she said.

In fact, the attendance was well above what Baroody had estimated for this event, the first of its kind at Winthrop.

Baroody prepared about 200 registration packets and by 12:30 p.m. they had all been distributed. She said that long after the packets were gone, the students kept coming.

"Pat (McFadden) who works in Dinkins said she's worked there for two years and had never seen anything like it," Baroody said.

The large crowds in the small area reserved for the fair caused bottlenecks and cramped conditions throughout the day-long event, but Baroody said this didn't seem to dampen the enthusiasm of the students.

"Even with the inconveniences, people still seemed excited and willing to put up with the waiting. I think they were really excited by the whole concept," Baroody said.

She said she is thrilled by the student response, because it means they know what's going on and they care about their health.

Baroody said many students were referred to the Crawford

Health Center health counseling center after the diagnostic test uncovered what could be a problem and she said students were able to get for free tests that usually cost a good deal and get information they need to control any problem that exists before it worsens with time.

Students said they not only had fun at the fair, but learned a lot about their health and what they can do to improve it.

"It was a thing where you could find out what's going on inside and realize you're not as healthy as you thought you were so you can do something about it," said Chris O'Rear, a junior music education major.

"People kept coming up to me and telling me how great it was and asking if we were going to do it again next year," Baroody said.

Baroody said that thanks to the hard work of the volunteers, the generous contributions of local businesses and the positive input of the student body, the event will be held annually.

Crowded, but healthy

More than 500 students visited the first student health fair last Wednesday to receive free blood sugar screening, cholesterol testing, body fat analysis and other tests, Vicky Baroody, student wellness coordinator, said the turnout was so good this year that the health fair has been approved for next year.

Self defense course helps Winthrop co-eds

By ROBERT HOFFMAN
Johnsonian Staff Writer

Have you ever been out at a bar and had someone get too friendly with you? Have you been followed home? Have you ever been physically threatened?

If so, then the women's self defense course is the solution you've been waiting for.

Mark Andrew and Rick Stamey, seniors, are American Open Style karate black belts teaching womens' self defense classes.

"Physical assault is a problem every woman has to consider. This course is going to provide them with a way to protect themselves," Andrew said.

Many self defense moves are taught so that the woman can defend herself against assault, or men getting too friendly. Women should be prepared for a light to moderate workout and should be ready to throw an 'attacker' to the ground.

"I don't care how many times I get thrown to the ground, if it saves someone's life, it's worthwhile," said Andrews.

Currently, five students are enrolled in the class. Karen Parker, a junior, said she is taking the course because several of her friends have been attacked on campus.

"If this happens to me, I want to be able to defend myself," she said. "It's not that strenuous a workout, and it's a very useful course. The instructors care about what they're doing."

Three classes are left for the spring semester. The course is being co-sponsored by the student life committee and if there is enough participation, the course will be offered next fall.

Classes are held in Withers Gym from 7-9 p.m. and the fee is $10, part of which is donated to pay for a certificate. The rest of the money will go toward restoration of the Southern Karate Academy in Rock Hill.

The RHFD and the college that cried 'wolf'

Any person who stays on campus for any given length of time will soon hear the inevitable wail of fire engines and ambulances as they make their way to one of many false alarms.

Unfortunately, the number of visits by the Rock Hill Fire Department has become increasingly frequent this year.

Students who find their thrills on the handle of a fire alarm should try to redirect their recreational activities to more conventional means.

Pulling fire alarms causes several problems, including the following:

- The fire department must respond to an alarm; there is no speculating when the bells go off.
- While responding to a false alarm, firefighters may miss a real emergency. Such could cost thousands of dollars and human lives.
- It costs money every time the big trucks roll for any purpose. That cost becomes ridiculous when the department is forced to respond when there is no fire.

The Winthrop College campus has "cried wolf" too many times lately. Who knows, maybe one day we'll have a fire and no one will come.

Look who's crying now

So, Missouri Rep. Richard Gephardt cried last week when he dropped out of the quest for the Democratic presidential nomination.

So what?

Political weeping became a major issue last summer when Colorado congresswoman Pat Schroeder announced that she had decided against seeking the Democratic nomination. As she began to choke on her words and shed tears, media hounds immediately began to speculate on the strength of her character and the quality of her leadership.

Political weeping has been prominent in American politicians for many years. Richard Nixon cried when he announced his resignation as president.

Perhaps we as members of the media should quit looking so much at the emotional output of our national candidates and consider their qualifications instead.

Spring springs an ankle

Spring has sprung.
Sprung an ankle, that is.

The birdies are singing, the little kiddies are once again playing in the parks, professors are giving their lectures on the lawn. It's that time of year when people are just a little happier, and the stores put all that pastel stuff on sale.

It's also the time of year that the sunbathers of the world start their yearly ritual of working on getting that sun cancer - oops - that base tan for that little bikini for the yearly crusade to the shores of these United States.

Now, while I don't normally go around looking at these bathing beauties, I do watch the men on campus while they're watching the women, and some of the sights I see are so funny they're pitiful.

A friend of mine - I won't mention his name - is one of the normally normal people who suddenly turn into bumbling, bug-eyed, tongue-tied idiots at the sight of a female belly button. He is usually a calm, although gregarious, person with the cool capabilities of a neurosurgeon.

However, at the sight of a bikini-clad body basking in the sunshine, he changes. His eyes bug out, his face turns red, and he falls over anything that happens to be in his way, like cars and curbs and other people. In the past week he has bumped into one car, tripped on one curb, and walked all over my feet, all within a few feet of the people who sunbathe beside Phelps Hall.

He has also taken the longest route possible from the office to the cafeteria, usually going by way of Bancroft, Margaret Nance, McLaurin and the lake for good measure.

He's not the only one. I've seen men in dark blue business suits walk into other pedestrians while trying to look at the sunbathers, nonchalantly, of course. I even saw a certain public safety officer take about 20 minutes to put a parking ticket on one of the cars parked in the Bancroft lot.

And let's not forget the cavalcade of cars of assorted shapes filled with locals, of equally assorted shapes and sizes who, on the advice of their friends, come to Winthrop to take a look at what's on display. My own godbrother came up one day last week in his 1987 RX7, with the radio blasting.

"I came to see me frat brothers," he said.

Malarkey.

It's not that I'm jealous. I do my share of sunbathing and I get my share of stares. I just want you guys out there to be careful while you're looking, because you may end up like my friend.

Flat on your face.

Positions to be advertised by Senate

By TIM O'BRIANT
Johnsonian Staff Writer

Presidential appointments will become more open to the entire student body next year if a bill proposing advertising and open applications for the positions is passed by senate.

Formerly, the president appointed only students that he knew or were recommended by other students, faculty and staff.

The bill, proposed by senators Kathy Smith, Gina Silver and Marion Bostic, passed in first reading.

Senator Chris McCord proposed a recommendation that the college remove the asphalt mounds or ramps currently used for handicapped access to sidewalks and replace them with cut-aways.

McCord said this would make access easier and safer for the handicapped while making it easier to park along the sidewalks. The bill passed in first reading.

Requisitions:

• The Winthrop Windsurfing Club was allocated $1,000 out of a requested $2,000. The money will be used to by surfboards for the group.

• The Psychology Club requested $325.19 to attend a conference in Raleigh, N.C. Under Student Allocations Commission guidelines, the group was only allowed $151.34.

• The Communications Association requested $1,300 for a recruitment party, advertising and lectures. Discussion of the requisition was passed to committee after it passed first reading.

Pitching boosts Eagles

By EUGENE JOLLEY
Johnsonian Sports Writer

The Winthrop College softball team was able to bounce back from losing a double header to Georgia State to sweep a double header from Georgia Tech., 6-0 and 6-1.

Behind the pitching of Tab Sturkie and Kim Harley, who combined on a two hitter in the first game, the Lady Eagles were able to take a 6-0 victory over the Yellow Jackets.

Sturkie, who had two hits in the first game, pulled to the .500 mark at 7-7. As a team, the Lady Eagles pounded out 13 hits.

In the second game, Lisa Kemme struck out a season high 13 batters while holding the Lady Yellow jackets to five hits to gain her sixth victory against six losses. Sandy Gilles led the Eagle hitting attack with two hits.

"We have come a long way already this season. We are a young team, but we have improved tremendously, lately. I feel like we are turning into the team that we should be," said Winthrop coach Frankie Griffin.

"I have been pleased with the pitching thus far. We have played a tough schedule, and they have done the job. Our hitting has been inconsistent thus far. We have improved, but we need to continue to work hard in that area," Griffin said.

The Lady Eagles dropped a double header to Georgia State, 3-1 and 6-0.

In the first game Winthrop had two rallies, one coming in the sixth inning when the Lady Eagles loaded the bases. However, Georgia State then got Susan Ayers to ground out killing the rally.

In the second game, Winthrop was held to three singles as Georgia State completed the sweep.

The Lady Eagles stand at 14-15 overall. Winthrop will play host to UNC-Charlotte today at 3 p.m.

Baseball coach captures 300th

By DIETRICH LONG
Johnsonian Sports Writer

Since coming to Winthrop, baseball coach Horace Turbeville has accomplished two milestones. One is winning over 300 games as the eagle coach and the second being winning over 500 games in his lifetime.

Turbeville, in his ninth season as the Eagles' mentor, has compiled a record of 304 wins against only 82 losses. The 300th win came against tough Big South Conference foe Campbell.

"I tried not to think about it (winning 300 games) before it happened, but after it occurred it brought a feeling of pride and nostalgia about past players," Turbeville said. "It also made me reflect upon the good times and bad times."

When asked what his secret to winning was, Turbeville replied it was probably the values he tries to teach and by having some good athletes on the roster.

"I try to be straightforward and honest to the young people," Turbeville said, "and I try to make integrity a team concept."

Turbeville, who says he started out being more involved in football than baseball, played football at Clemson University. He quarterbacked the Tigers in the 1957 Orange Bowl.

He played shortstop on the Tiger's baseball team and later played a little semi-pro baseball.

Since then he's been coaching for the past 29 years.

He coached 16 years of football at Newberry College. That later overlapped with his coaching baseball, which, in total, he's been coaching for 21 years.

Turbeville said he's glad he was at Winthrop when the 300 game milestone occurred.

"Winthrop students are very appreciative of the baseball team," Turbeville said. "We hope to give them pride in what we do."

Turbeville, who does his own recruiting, says he recruits everywhere, but mainly in the East. He says he tries to get as many local players as he can, but has had players from Florida, Canada, and other out-of-state places.

"I try to be fair with these young guys and they work hard for me," he said.

"To me success isn't really just winning, it's the values they have when they leave, because they're only here for four years."

Art Inabinet, No. 9, receives high-fives from teammates after connecting on a grand slam homerun during the Edinboro contest last week. The Eagles improve to 12-9 on the year.

Bodybuilders to compete in 'Mr. and Ms. Winthrop' contest

By RANDY PHILLIPS
Johnsonian Sports Editor

If you thought last year was a blast, just wait until April 12 when the intramural department and the fitness club sponsors the "Mr. and Ms. Winthrop" bodybuilding contest.

Charlie Bowers, assistant professor of physical education, said this year's competition will be much more experienced than the competition last year.

This years competition is packed with bodybuilders who have competed in other contests. Although, there are some competing in their first competition. This years contest will feature approximately 25 men and women competing for the title of "Mr. and Ms. Winthrop."

Bowers said these men and women have been working toward obtaining the perfect body for the contest.

A body building contest is more than just building the perfect body. A competitor must choreograph his poses with music to make his or her body more attractive.

The contest will be held at 8 p.m. in the Tillman Auditorium. It is free to Winthrop students, faculty and staff. The general public will pay $3 to witness the contest.

A set of keys was recovered that would open nearly every building on the Winthrop campus, Harper said. According to notes found in the RV, Pratt is suspected of planning to rob more locations campus-wide during March or April, Harper said.

Harper has served warrants on the pair charging both with two counts of second degree burglary, one count of second degree larceny, one count of petty larceny and one count of possession of master keys.

Statesville, N.C., police have filed 22 warrants against the suspects and are also beginning extradition proceedings. Pratt will face a Georgia grand jury for indictment sometime early this month and will probably stand trial in another six weeks, Harper said.

It may be some time before the suspects face trial here in South Carolina because of all the charges he faces in these states, Harper said. Pratt is also under investigation in connection with similar thefts by the FBI and in states throughout the nation.

"He was very familiar with the college scene so he wouldn't hesitate to walk into any building and start asking questions. People, not suspecting anything would probably try to help him," Harper said.

If anyone saw or talked to the suspects while they were in the area, Harper said he would like to speak them. "We'd like to place him on campus if we can," Harper said.

New, Mighty Mouse becomes cult star

(CPS) — Jimmy Daniels has a secret.

The 34-year-old University of Mississippi journalism instructor gets up early on Saturday mornings to watch Mighty Mouse. "It's the only reason I get up on Saturdays," said Daniels. "I watch Mighty Mouse and then go back to bed."

"I never talk about it here," Daniels said in the office of The Mississippian, Ole Miss's campus paper. His colleagues wouldn't understand.

"It's something you keep to yourself until you find someone else who's a fan. Then you get together and ask which episodes are their favorites. I'm corresponding with some students at the University of Missouri about the show."

Daniels shouldn't be all that lonely: "Mighty Mouse: The New Adventures," created by adult cartoon veteran Ralph Bakshi and a staff just out of the California Institute of Art, is becoming a hit on many college campuses.

This, mind you, is a very different Mighty Mouse than the weenie do-gooder who sang opera while dispatching evil on the small screen 20 and 30 years ago.

acknowledgements because of its general education requirements," Lyles said.

After the ceremony, a portrait of James Pinckney Kinard, former dean of the English department and Winthrop president from 1928 until 1934, was unveiled, and a plaque was presented to Lyles.

Kinard Hall, built in 1923, was the main academic building for 58 years and currently houses the college of arts and sciences. It was struck by lightning in August, 1986, and suffered $1.5 million in damages.
